Pork spareribs have been a familar economy cut meal treat for many families for a long time, and they are tasty eating when cooked slowly at a lower temperature. Given time, that full delicious spareribflavor is born! Seemingly, the bone marrow plays an important role in that special spareribflavor. Of course, flat or regular spareribs are composed mostly of bone and fat with very little meat meat apparent.

Now, a better buy for spareribs lovers may be in the country style, farmer style or old-fashioned spareribs. These have approximately 40 percent more meat on the bone and generally run 10c or more per pound less than the regular or flat cut spareribs. The country style spareribs comes from the rib end of the whole pork loin, cut between the fifth and seventh ribs. Then, the ribs are simply broken so the meat cut will lay flat and cook more evenly. Cooking techniques for the country style cut is similar to that of the regular cut. That is a low temperature. Barbecue sauce adds that special touch. Again tasty eating and a bonu: more meat for your money.

You know, the new pork comes from a truly pampered pig. The hog of yesteryear was fat with lard as the principle by-product. Today, the hog is referred to as a "meat type" hog. Essentially, producers have adjusted the hog to meet the diet-conscious, less-fat, more-meat preferred consumer. As a result, pork at most meat counters is lean and tender.

In this time of higher prices, why not meet some of the favorite economy cuts, country style spareribs included? Think you'll be surprised at what you've been missing.

An interesting side note here. Meat merchandisers say that if the movement on the country style spareribpicks up, it will create more movement of the whole pork loin.

Therefore, there is a special benefit to the consumer; an automatic lowering of prices on center cut pork chops and pork roasts. That's the second reason to try them soon. It's a double-barrel reason!

Energy Saving Tips For The Week

1. Homeowners with central air conditioning or hot air heating systems should check closely for air leaks in ductwork especially at connection points. Leaks can be repaired with cloth adhesive tape. Ductwork exposed to the outside should be insulated for additional reduction of losses.

2. Without an attic fan, your attic temperature can be as much as 35 degrees higher than the outside temperature during hot days. Your air conditioner does not have to work as hard or use as much energy if it is not fighting this extra heat. A thermostatically controlled attic fan or a wind powered roof ventilator could be one of your best energy conserving investments.

3. The gaskets around your refigerator, freezer and freezing compartment doors should be kept intact. To check the gasket, close the door on a piece of paper. If it pulls out with no drag, the seal is no good and the gasket should be replaced.

4. Do you know some friends who are planning a motoring vacation at the same time as your family? Why not try to combine your trips?

5. During the late afternoon and early evening hours the load on electric systems reaches its peak, and to meet the rising loads the electric systems reaches its peak, and

5. During the late afternoon and early evening hours the load on electric systems reaches its peak, and to meet the rising loads the electric utilities must start up inefficient generating equipment. If everyone scheduled household chores to minimize energy use during the peak load hours, fewer inefficient generating units would have to be placed in service, and the utilities' daily fuel consumption would be reduced.

6. When working in the garden or workshop, remember to use hand tools, pruners and clippers in place of powered equipment whenever possible.

7. Use proper defrosting methods for manual refrigerators/freezer. These appliances consume less energy than those that defrost automatically, but they must be defrosted frequently and as quickly as possible to maintain that edge. Frost should not be allowed to build up to more than one-quarter of an inch.

MRS. DICKERSONS 4-H

Our 4-H meeting was held Friday, April 4. First the president, Denise Jackson, called the meeting to order. Then we had the pledges to the American and 4-H flags. We then sung a song and played a game, led by Donna Baldwin and Luanne Crain, recreation leaders. Michael Richardson, secretary, read the minutes of the last meeting. Then the president asked for old business which was demonstrations, wildlife feed patches, a horse and pony club, and "farming 200 years ago" posters. Then the president asked for new business which was 4-H camp and "Milk is a Natural" poster. Then the vice president, Bruce Sanders, turned the meeting over to Mr. Sweet. He showed us slides of 4-H Camp and told us about 4-H Camp. Then our president, Denise Jackson, adjourned the meeting.
